Close-up Photographer of the Year (CUPOTY) is a celebration of close-up, macro and micro photography – an annual competition created to showcase images that help us see the world anew. Our second contest closed for entries on May 17th, 2020. We are currently putting together the shortlist, which will be announced late June/early July.

Close-up Photographer of the Year

Photographing people close-up is a little different than photographing street architecture or doing documentary-style street photography. While the main reasoning behind street photography itself is to get away from posed, artificial and repetitive, photographing random strangers provides a great opportunity to work with raw beauty.

A close-up lens is a high quality magnifying glass that fits on the front of your camera's lens. It works by reducing the minimum focusing distance of the lens it is attached to. As a result you can move your lens closer to your subject and get greater magnification. The strength of close-up lenses is measured in diopters, just like eye-glasses.

In close-up photography, your depth of field is limited. (The depth of field is the amount of the photo that's actually in focus). You can get the petal of a flower in focus, but then the stem will be blurry. Or you can get the stem of the flower in focus, but then the stem will be blurry.

A Beginner's Guide to Stunning Close-Up Photography

The quickest way is to choose the close-up program from your camera's vari-programs/scene modes menu. The camera will set a relatively small aperture—about f/5.6 for enough depth-of-field to create a striking close-up photograph. Lens choice is vital to the capturing a sharp, frame-filling close-up.
