I think Kipling wanted in some way to exult the values of the empire he believed he belonged to. As I read in an article in The Guardian, he was criticised for doing so but he won a Noble Prize at an early age, so he was admired for his creativity. Best known for his writings on children's stories and travel stories he might have made a point about adventure, search and the value of old age ...

"The Betrothed" is a poem by Rudyard Kipling, first published in book form in Departmental Ditties (1886). It is a tongue-in-cheek work by the young bachelor Kipling, who affected a very worldly-wise stance. In it, he takes as his epigraph the report of evidence in a breach of promise case, "You must choose between me and your cigar". The poem simply has a narrator musing on the difference ...
